It would be helpful to know how close the bilateral room and the overflow room are to the room where the EMM discussions will take place.

Subject: G7 EMM - Updates on Badging Info

Hi Everyone,

Please see the responses below for badging for the G7 EMM. The items that require our attention are determining what level (red or blue) badges everyone needs, and getting the registration information for the drivers, including a passport/ID scan. Does the existing list of Embassy participants already include drivers? If not, please send me that information along with the types that are needed on your end.

I plan to reply to their email this morning with a few additional questions on the set-up of the meeting itself. If you all have anything to add this list below, please let me know. We don't want to overwhelm them, but hope they understand that the difference in types of badge necessitates these questions.

1. How many delegation members should plan to sit in the ministerial meeting room for the EMM and require a red badge? We assume that 1 person will be seated next to the Administrator and 1 will be seated behind him. Is this correct?
2. We also assume there will be an overflow room for remaining delegation members to sit and watch a stream of the event. Is this the case?
3. We assume the seating order is in the order of G7 presidencies and that the U.S. will be in between France and the U.K.. Is this correct?
4. We understand that a delegation room would be made available during the ministerial meeting. Are any additional details available yet on this room, including how large it will be? Could it be used to host bilateral meetings or should we identify another space for official meetings?
5. Will there be printing facilities available during the meeting?
6. Is there an updated agenda available for the EMM event? In particular, we are hoping to find out names of specific meeting rooms where the ministerial sessions will be held.

Thanks!

Alexis

Subject: R: G7 Environment Ministerial Meeting Registration - QUESTION ON DELEGATE TYPE

Dear Alexis,

here the response to your questions.

- 1) Red badges allows to access to the Ministerial Meeting Room. Blue badges allows to enter the conference venue. Side events apply blue badges.
- 2) Yes. Drivers too will have blue badges to enter the conference venue.
- 3) Security members don't need badges to visit the meeting venue on June 5.
- 4) You will be informed by the Focal Point assigned to you (Mr. Mauro Di Buono Ex. 6 - Personal Privacy)

Best regards

Oggetto: FW: G7 Environment Ministerial Meeting Registration - QUESTION ON DELEGATE TYPE

Hello,

Many thanks for sharing the registration link! Hoping to get your help with a quick question or two before I begin submitting them for our delegation.

- What is the difference between red and blue area delegates? How do side events apply?
- Do drivers need badges to enter the grounds of the Savoia?
- We will have some advance and security members visiting the meeting site on June 5. Do they need badges to enter at that time? If so, how should they plan to get them?
- How will delegations generally proceed to pick up badges and on what date is best for you?

Thanks again!

Alexis
